

Malcolm Davidow Biography

Malcolm Davidow is a partner at Schwartz Advisors, a management consulting firm specializing in the auto parts industry.

He also sits on the boards of The Retrofit Source, LLC, a private-equity-owned automotive lighting supplier, and Entricit, LLC, an automotive aftermarket-centric telematics solution provider.

Malcolm was most recently at Pep Boys where he was Vice President, Digital Operations, responsible for Pep Boys' online business and chain-wide digital assets.

Prior to joining Pep Boys in 2011, Malcolm founded, operated and later sold a business that liquidated excess auto parts and accessory inventory on its own Web site and eBay.

In 2004, Malcolm was recruited by Amazon to be its first Director, Automotive.

Prior to joining Amazon, he was Senior Vice President of CompressorWorks, responsible for product development and information technology.

Malcolm is the founder, and former CEO and chairman of eAuto, Incorporated, a venture-backed online auto parts and accessories merchant.

He was previously the director of both the international operations and product development teams at Four Seasons Division of Standard Motor Products, as well as a member of the Board of Directors of Valeo Four Seasons, a joint venture in Angers, France between Valeo and Standard Motor Products.

Prior to joining Four Seasons, Malcolm was a Senior Consultant in Accenture's information technology consulting practice.

He has an MBA from George Washington University, a BA from Tulane University and the Automotive Aftermarket Professional certification.